

Administrative Response to State Registration Charge

Your Honor,

This matter is raised purely as an administrative conflict, not an adjudicative controversy.

The charge assumes an obligation of registration under the State's administrative code. However, the property in question is already registered and regulated under a separate administrative body.

Administrative systems operate on the principle of exclusive jurisdiction. Dual registration under conflicting authorities creates overlapping claims that are procedurally incompatible and administratively unworkable.

This Court is not being asked to recognize external authority—only to evaluate whether the State can compel duplicative registration over a property that is already administered elsewhere.

Because compliance with both systems is structurally impossible, the alleged violation is grounded in an administrative contradiction, not in a failure of intent or duty.

For that reason, dismissal is respectfully requested on purely administrative grounds.
